

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

By HOLLAND &amp; KILGO

What is soil conservation? Soil conservation is proper use and care of the land. It means using the land to produce the greatest amounts of the things most needed, and at the same time protecting so it will not lose its productivity.

J. W. Andrews of Brooklyn community says that his cows have had much better grazing since he started improving his pasture. Last year he planted 3 acres of bahia grass. Around the 1st of October the bahia grass will be overseeded with 20 pounds of crimson clover per acre. The clover will provide winter grazing and nitrogen for the bahia. Andrews plans to increase his planting of bahia grass this year.

Mr. Andrews is cooperating with the Wiregrass Soil Conservation District in putting each acre of his land to its best use.

C. H. Kimbrough, Area Engineer, Soil Conservation Service, was in West Coffee County last week planning water disposal systems. He pointed out that sodded water-ways is the safe way to dispose of excess water from cultivated fields. These water-ways should be located in all necessary draws, and they should be established before terraces are run on the field.

Bahia grass is a good grass to use in establishing water-ways. It is deep rooted and will stand a lot of punishment. It will not become a pest. The grass also stands droughts.

The following farmers cooperating with the Wiregrass Soil Conservation District are going to establish a water disposal system on their farms: Wallace Cain, Basin community, Moss Harrison, Perry St. Community, and Felix Donaldson, Curtis community.

The local soil conservation technician will assist farmers in designing water disposal systems. Mrs. Cleo Hawkins attended a State Textbook meeting in Montgomery last week.

James Martin and little son Jimmie are recovering from tonsillitis, they underwent at Dothan Hospital Monday.

Buddy Windham of Abbeville spent the weekend with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Windham.

Mrs. Frank Rainier, Miss Charles Montes and Mrs. Frank Rainier Jr. attended the S. E. Regional welfare association convention in Jacksonville, Fla. last week.

Graham Grant, husband of Peggy S. Grant, of Route 1, Parish, Ala., was enlisted for a tour of three years in the United States Marine Corps September 28th, at the Marine Corps Recruiting Station, Birmingham, Alabama.

Private Grant was transferred to the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C. for an intensive 10-week "boot camp" training period.

Assigned to the battalion as operations sergeant, Grant entered the Army in June 1940 and is a veteran of World War II.

The battalion, in Korea since December 1950, provides railway security for UN supplies and material shipped through Korea. Military policemen of the 772nd escort train from the ports in the south to the buffer zone units in the north.

Assigned to the battalion as operations sergeant, Grant entered the Army in June 1940 and is a veteran of World War II.

He will then climax his recruit training by firing the famed Garand rifle for record. In addition, Grant will become well versed with other infantry weapons such as the 45 caliber pistol, carbine and Browning automatic rifle. He will also witness demonstration firing of the machine gun, mortar and flame thrower.

SHORT STORY

When Tommy Comes Home

By Maria Martorana

STAN was holding the morning paper in front of him like a shield. But this morning it didn't matter. It was a wonderful day, nothing could mar it. Tommy was coming home.

By lifting her head Ann could look from the dinette into the living room where Tommy's picture held the place of honor on the mantel—how straight he stood in that picture.

"And I'm proud of him too," she told herself. If only she hadn't missed him so much. She sighed for the days when he had been away. Stan peered around the edge of the paper. "Say something, dear?"

"No, I'm just feeling sort of happy today."

He nodded in understanding agreement, retreated behind his paper once more.

Her husband laid down his paper, stood up and came to her side. "Take exactly nine minutes to get to the depot from here," he said. He looked at his watch. "Train's not due for another fifty-five minutes. But—just in case, this one time it might be early. I'll go now." His smile was up

"Sure you don't want to come along," he called from the front hall.

Understanding as he brushed her cheek with his lips.

"Sure you don't want to come along," he called from the front hall.

"No, I'll wait here."

The door closed. She heard the car starting. It wouldn't be for her to be at the depot when Tommy's train arrived. She was such a busy about housewife and home leavings too. She'd be sure to cry. Her husband and son would be uncomfortable, shifting from one foot to the other.

"Mother always takes on so," was their pet phrase about her. They just don't understand, she thought. They don't know that when a boy leaves for the first time, it's natural for his mother to worry and fret about him.

She walked to the kitchen door, watched the white sheets flapping on the clothesline. Only today they weren't sheets. They were sails in the breeze and the grass underneath was the green sea. Overhead the sky was brilliantly blue. It was a perfect June day. She stretched her arms, sighed with pleasure.

"I wonder," she said aloud. "How often in a lifetime does this blue come to a person? Very soon now her son would be home."

She ran up to his room. Everything was in order. His prized possessions were exactly as he had left them. "There's nothing to do but wait," she murmured.

Her heart skipped a beat when she saw the car coming around the corner. The train wasn't due yet and there was Stan returning home. Even though she had wanted him to get to the station early, there never had been a time that the morning train was ahead of schedule. Had something happened? Was something wrong with Tommy? But that was absurd.

She would have had a wire or telephone call right here at home. She ran down the stairs, almost tripping over the bottom step in her haste. The door seemed to stick when she tried to open it. It was several seconds before she realized it was locked. She had it open finally. Stan was coming up the driveway, a suitcase in each hand. Tommy was right behind him.

"He took an early train," her husband called.

Ann breathed a sigh of relief. Her arms were around Tommy. "It's good to have you home, son," she said. She held him close for a moment. "Here let me look at you. My you look fine."

"I'm okay, Mom and say, guess what?" His words tumbled out before she could answer. "I've been promoted to Sergeant."

"How wonderful," she breathed. She could feel pride for him welling inside. "Just imagine," she said to herself. "A sergeant already." She gazed proudly at the emblem on his sleeve that read, "St. Andrew's military academy."

"St. Andrew's military academy,"

"St. Andrew's military academy,"

ELBA POSTOFFICE MOVES

(LAST WEEK)

The Elba postoffice moved into its new quarters in the Taylor building at the corner of Buford and Factory last Tuesday evening and was serving patrons in the handsome new building Wednesday morning. The new room affords much more space than the old postoffice. An important feature of the new setup is the greatly increased number of lock boxes, approximately 500 in number. For a long time there has been a shortage of boxes with a waiting list. Now there will be plenty of boxes to supply all who desire them. A number of extra size boxes were available.

The Elba postoffice has been located in the Cooper building next to the Emergency Aid building for forty years. Postmasters who served in this location were: Williams Mullins, Charles Talbot, Stephen Rowe, Waltus Maddox and the present postmaster, W. L. English.

Previous to moving into the Cooper building (Rainer building at that time) the postoffice was located on the south side of the square, dispensed postmasters were: Simmons, Roberts sisters, Mary and Alice. Postmaster Mullins served in the southside location until the postoffice was moved into the Cooper building.

SHORT STORY*Fall Guy

By John Massie Davis

EXCITEDLY, Professor Markham scraped at the dirt on the tunnel floor, revealing solid stone a few inches down. He swung the pick again, and chips flew from the stone, on the third blow the point went through. Working carefully now, Markham enlarged the opening and fell upon his stomach in the dirt. His flashlight beam stabbed down through swirling dust, disturbed for the first time in centuries—and reflected a yellow glare from heaps of ornaments and jewelry.

Instantly, the professor knew he had discovered the secret burial place of an Aztec emperor.

Or, there was a fortune in solid gold in the little tomb! For several minutes Markham lay lying flat, then leaped into rapid action. He covered the opening with a flat piece of shale and patted it carefully over everything. Dusting his clothes, he walked out of the shaft and toward the camp. His partner, Williams, was busy cataloging their findings, and looked up as Markham approached. "Any luck?"

The older man smiled slightly. "No—not yet. His mind was working rapidly, and we'll have a lot of work to do. The older man smiled slightly. "No—not yet. His mind was working rapidly, and we'll have a lot of work to do. The older man smiled slightly. "No—not yet. His mind was working rapidly, and we'll have a lot of work to do."

As he felt the rope tighten he tugged as hard as he dared. Williams, and it would have to look good—like an accident. "This afternoon, let's climb the old Indian trail to the cliff dwellings."

"All right, Professor—you're the boss," Williams leaned back, "but let me finish this listing. Then we'll have a pot of coffee and start out."

Shortly after noon the two men left. Markham knew the trail well—very well.

"Better lash ourselves together, Williams," he warned, "parts of this trail are pretty tricky." His assistant nodded, and the men made the rope ends fast around their waists, and started up the hill with Professor Markham in the lead. Unseen by Williams, the old man was scraping at the rope with the blade of a small pen knife.

Occasionally, he glanced furtively down, noting with satisfaction the shredding, parting strands. Minutes before they came to the most dangerous part of the path, Markham was ready.

Faces and chests pressed against the stone, they inched out the weather-worn old path. Professor Markham reached the curve around the face, and disappeared from the younger man's sight.

"Now," Markham thought. "This is it!" Calm as he was he couldn't have watched another tople to death. His own footing was none too good, but releasing one hand, he seized the rope, and by a series of juggling movements pulled it through his fingers, taking up the slack. As he felt it tighten, he tugged as hard as he dared—and was rewarded by a panicky shout from around the boulder.

"Markham!" It was Williams. "Markham—has anything happened?" The professor smiled grimly. Happened? He'd make it happen! He pulled again, harder; then gave a mighty yank, careless of his own safety, a little too careless. His left foot slipped—and he swayed precariously over the cruel rocks below. He grabbed at the rope, this time for his own safety—but it wasn't enough! Screaming hoarsely, Professor Markham seemed slowly and steadily as he lurched into the canyon.

Williams had felt the jerking at the rope; it had almost dislodged him. By sheer luck he had wrapped his arms around an outcropping of rock, hanging desperately. He knew something was wrong—but what? After the last sudden pull, he heard Markham's scream, and hugged the rock with all his strength, expecting a wrenching jar when the rope drew tight. Instead, there was only a quick, sudden tug at his waist—and the rope swung free!

It was several minutes before Williams controlled himself enough to inch back along the perilous cliff. When he reached safer ground he discovered, with a gasp, that Markham lay where he had fallen, beyond help.

P. T. A. MEETING

The Kinston P. T. A. held its regular monthly meeting at the High School Auditorium on last Thursday evening. Some sixty two parents and teachers were present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Robert Wise. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Joseph Saunders. Rev. Robert Malory, pastor of the Kinston Baptist Church, gave the devotional. Mr. Taylor, accompanied by Mrs. R. E. Williams led the group in singing two lively songs. Mrs. Charlie Spears, past president, spoke on the meaning and purpose of P. T. A. work. Principal E. C. Nevin welcomed the group, introduced the new teachers and reported the largest enrollment in the history of Kinston High School.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS
The man who refuses to neglect his life righteously may find himself and others some of the time, but he cannot for a moment feel his conscience which is forever within him, to speak in the still of the night. He who lives within God, however, lives without fear.

The Elementary School has not reached its peak enrollment, he reported. Mrs. Colbert Anderson, Lunch Room Supervisor, reported that in spite of a further cut in government reimbursement, the lunch room would continue to serve lunches for fifteen cents.

Mr. Howard Bess, program chairman, presented the following program entitled "Patriotism and Our Schools". What Kinston School is doing to teach Patriotism and Americanism—Mrs. Gladys Nevin; "Why I Am Proud to be an American"—a theme written for Junior II English—Mary Ann Moody; The "Freedom U. S. A." contest of last year—Mr. Jack Solomon; "Freedom U. S. A."—an essay which won regional honors and $100.00 prize—Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Wise then presented County Superintendent of Education, Mr. J. Farris, who gave his group a statement of the financial conditions of Coffee County Public Schools. Despite the very dry and present condition, Mr. Farris expressed hope that by economy, careful planning and spending, the county school system can, in time, be put on a firm foundation.

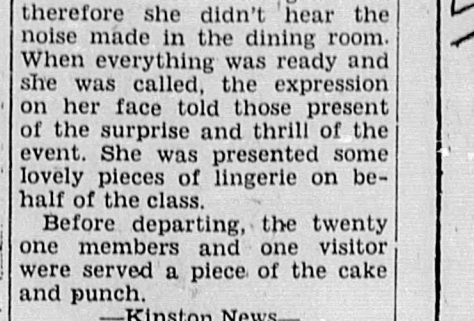

The meeting was then adjourned. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mrs. Josie Matthews, Mrs. G. P. Nobles, and Mrs. Foy Anderson.

SURPRISE AFFAIR
Mrs. Janie Alsworth received none of the surprises of her life Thursday afternoon, Oct. 1st at 6:30 when members of the Ladies Bible Class of the Baptist Church met at her home honoring her on her eighty-fourth birthday anniversary. When arriving, Mrs. W. C. Thorn and Mrs. J. T. Anderson went in and Mrs. Alsworth, thinking they had come for an ordinary visit, sat in the living room with them. The other members entered the back

SHORT STORY

The Pinch

By Orlan Jones

"Did you get a look at her in there?" John Carson asked his wife.

"Yes," Mrs. Carson said quietly. "Did you ever see anything like that?"

Mrs. Carson didn't answer. She was wiping the supper dishes, and she was sitting at the kitchen table drinking a cup of coffee. Mrs. Carson didn't answer because she knew her husband was pretty steamed up, and she knew he was going to do enough talking for both of them.

"I've never seen her look so pretty," Mr. Carson said. And what does she do? She sits in her looking like a scared rabbit. Why, all she'd have to do is flutter one eyelid and that Billy what's-his-name would fall off the sofa in sheer joy.

"His name's Billy Simmons. And you just remember that Helen's shy, and we won't get anywhere pushing her. She'll have to come out of it herself," Mrs. Carson said.

"But when? The girl's twenty now."

"I don't know when. But I do know this date with Billy means a great deal to her. He's the one

"Now look here, boy," he said. "I heard a noise out in the kitchen. Did you pinch my daughter?"

she moaned about all the time she was in high school. So don't you do anything to spoil her date tonight."

"She'll spoil it herself," Mr. Carson snapped. "When I came through the living room, I was sitting on one end of the sofa and this Billy what's-his-name was sitting on the other end. Billy looked bored, and she looked like she was going to pass out."

"I know, but there's nothing you can do."

"When that girl was growing up," Mr. Carson said, "I knew she was going to be a looker. I remember how I used to say I'd break the arm of any of those wild boys who came mooning around. But do you know what I wish right now?"

"No," Mrs. Carson said.

"I wish that Billy what's-his-name would pinch her, or something."

Mrs. Carson stopped washing dishes. "Now look here," she said. As he got out of his chair, Mrs. Carson clutched frantically at his arm. "What are you going to hear?" she asked. He didn't seem to hear. He just pushed past her and went into the living room.

Helen and Billy were sitting exactly as Mr. Carson had seen them when he passed through the living room a few minutes earlier. Mr. Carson waited until he was towering above them in front of the sofa before he spoke.

"Now look here, boy," he said. "I heard a noise out in the kitchen. Did you pinch my daughter?"

Billy Simmons' mouth dropped open in protest. Helen turned red, then yellow, then green, then red again.

"Answer me, boy," Mr. Carson said. But his answer came from a different source. Helen rose and stood erect before her father.

"If you ever say anything like that again," she said in a tone that even surprised Mr. Carson, "I will never bring another one of my friends into this house."

"It's all right," Billy said.

"It's not all right," Helen snapped. "You didn't pinch me, and I won't have my father accusing you of such a thing."

"I don't blame him for worrying about you," Billy said. "You're awful pretty."

Mr. Carson watched the compliment after her. It was wonderful to see her take it without blushing, or getting confused.

Then Mr. Carson watched Helen as she realized for the first time that she stood toe-to-toe with her husband. He saw the whole story in her face. At first there was surprise, then full understanding, and finally something very strange. Mr. Carson didn't understand the last expression until she spoke.

"All right, Billy," she said. "If you think I'm pretty, how about taking me dancing?"

When Helen and Billy had left, Mr. Carson turned to his wife and smiled.

"Did you see that look on her face?" he asked. "It was brazen—downright brazen."

GOING AWAY PARTY

Cornelia Ellis and Mary Ann Clark gave Will Harper, John Harper and Buddy Whitman a going away party Saturday evening. The party began when the boys came in and started listening to the Alabama-L. S. U. football game. The girls finally took the boys away from the radio long enough to eat a spaghetti supper. The living and dining rooms were decorated with aluminum streamers and emblems. The place cards had "War Eagles" on them. After the supper, the party split, half going to the L. S. U. and half to the Drive in.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

On Monday night, Sept. 28, Mr. James Patrons was given a surprise birthday party by the band. He concealed his age so a question mark was put on the cake. The band gave him a shirt and clothes holder.

Only the band was present.

BETA CLUB NEWS

A project committee was appointed by Bert English, Beta Club president, to plan some way to raise money for their banquet at the group's first meeting of the year. On the committee are Clara Ann Spurlin, Paul Miles, Barbara Grant, and Kimmy Dye. Plans were made for the initiation of new members.

Officers for this year are president, Betty Brown; secretary, Nina Hudson; reporter, Emma Jean Fuller.

FHA NEWS

Ann Fuller led the devotional at the opening meeting of the Elba Chapter of Future Homemakers of America, Oct. 1.

Officers for the year are: president, Clara Ann Spurlin; vice president, Patsy McCollough; secretary, Linda Lee; treasurer, Sue Morrow; historian, Jacqueline McKee; parliamentarian, Patsy Cain; reporter, Patricia Brooks; song leaders, Ellen Carter and Rosa Deal.

GIRLS PHYS. ED.

In the Physical Education Department the classes have been divided into three groups. Each group has a leader who acts as captain to keep the play ground and organize activities. These girls were chosen for leadership ability, character and grades.

Leaders for the Jr. 1 are Susan Murphree and Eloise Hattaway; Jr. 2, Judy Larkins and Roxie Seymore; Jr. 3, Cornelia Ellis and Inez Rowell; Sr. 1, Dollie Jacobs and Patsy McCollough; Sr. 2, Celia English and Shirley Brooks.

New gym suits will be royal blue and are appealing to one's eye.

The department has selected several new games for the girls to participate in and several new activities. Class captains will spend 15 minutes a day directing exercises.

SHORT STORY

Over Her Shoulder
By Mrs. Frank Chase

THE headlights of the car shone like cat's eyes as Eileen sped along the deserted mountain highway.

She looked in the rear view mirror at the trailer following behind her. It was riding smoothly. Her husband was taking his turn sleeping in the trailer. At the next town she would stop to change places with him.

She turned on the eleven o'clock news. The fugitive, who escaped from police in Los Angeles, has not been apprehended. He was last seen heading south in a stolen Ford. He is armed and dangerous.

She turned off the radio. Her fear of the dark was bad enough without any such reports stirring the imagination. She was tired. Her feet hurt and she decided to squander a few minutes of her time by stopping to change her shoes.

She pulled off the road but did not get out. She was on the floor and she rubbed her swollen feet. She looked at the clock. It was 11:00. She was alone. She was alone.

She started to get out. She looked over her shoulder. She looked over her shoulder. She looked over her shoulder.

As always, when starting, she glanced back at the trailer.

her shoulder just in time to see the blind, on the front window, go down with a jerk.

The criminal! He had gotten in the trailer when she'd stopped.

She just knew it. He might kill her.

She slowed down. Maybe she could get a big rock to use as a weapon.

What good would a rock do if he had a gun? There was no safety in stopping. She had to get to the police station—and soon.

Ed was always telling her she was wrong this time and that he was about to get the rest of her.

She lost all fear of skidding as she squealed the tires around each curve and raced her way down grades.

She was smart. He'd know the right approach if he didn't know maybe he'd hit him with the shovel.

After what seemed an eternity she saw the lights of the city.

She went through stop signs and drove to the well lighted police station. The officer behind the horn and waved her to the police station, an officer was already on his motorcycle.

There's a criminal in the trailer," she shouted, as she stopped the car and ducked down in the seat, wondering if she had made a fool of herself. If there was no stranger in the trailer.

The officer ran in hand, called to another officer who came running. He opened the trailer door and yelled, "Come out with your hands up or I'll shoot."

There was a silence. The officer fired a shot into the air. A tall, heavy set man came out, his hands held high. An officer searched him, removed his gun and shoved him into the police station. Eileen, her heart in her mouth, ran to the trailer.

The fugitive was locked in a cell and Eileen was helped into the station where she fell into a chair.

She started to tell her story. "Oh, Ed!" she cried, "Are you all right? I was so frightened. I got out to check the tail light when you stopped. Something hit me on the head. Next thing I remember I was being picked up by some people. Thank heavens you're right. I was afraid you'd stop along the highway. We were right back of you."

"You did know something was wrong in the trailer?"

"Yes," Eileen pulled the blind down. Ed and I had agreed never to pull this blind when either of us was driving because we signal through that window."

About People and Things
By C. B. McDowell

STROUD KILLS ROBAT

T. M. Stroud, who resides east of Elba on the Elba-New Brockton highway, reported that he shot a bobcat a week ago after it had killed two of his hens. He said another cat killed two more of his chickens, so he set a steeltrap and caught another one a few nights ago. Mr. Stroud said he hopes the depredations on his henhouse will cease.

Three marriage licenses were issued at the Elba post office during the past week as follows: John E. Jernigan, 28, Elba route one, and Miss Jeanette Wiloughby, 20, Jack route one. Charles E. Owens, 20, Elba route 5, and Miss Margaret Jean Nelson, 16, Brantley route two. Warren Chester Downing, 33, Tonnelle route one, and Miss Dorothy Ann Ziglar, 18, Arifton.

Early cold weather. A. A. Maddox was comparing the first fall weather of the past few days with a cold spell he remembers 41 years ago. He was married Oct. 5, 1906, and on that date this section of Alabama was visited by a heavy frost and hard freeze. When hearing about the episode, Harvey Dean and R. B. Burt were highly amused. They said they were having such fine weather right now, we may look for frost and freezing temperatures before long, as dog fennel is in full bloom and cock's burrs are maturing rapidly.

Although the storms may be no more than a few inches in height, they say it is a sure sign of colder weather.

Twenty bridges damaged. Judge J. O. English stated Wednesday morning that reports received from Commissioners in the four districts, approximately twenty bridges were more or less damaged by the recent storm, being pretty well distributed over the districts. He said most of the bridges have been sufficiently repaired to allow traffic to be resumed.

Judge English also stated that many roads throughout the county were damaged, some of them being washed out or less washed and left in a rough condition. He said he has been busy and most of the roads throughout the county have been smoothed and are now in good condition.
